A Sun Report: The CVPOA Meeting

By Elizabeth Cowley

The Carmel Valley Property Owners Association (CVPOA) Board of Directors held its monthly meeting on April 10 at the Mid Carmel Valley Fire Station.

Chris Cayce, CVPOA President, reported that a letter was sent to the California Senate Local Government Committee outlining the CVPOA's position against California Senator Mello's Bill 1951. Bill 1951 would dissolve the currently elected Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD) Board of Directors with an appointed board composed of city mayors and 2 members from the County Board of Supervisors. The bill was heard by the California Senate Local Government Committee on April 10 and the CVPOA had yet to receive a response by that date.

George Boehlert, Chair of the Water Management Committee, reported that the Protect Our Water Resources (POWR) citizen committee was circulating an initiative petition directing the MPWMD not to allocate any new water until a legal water supply is obtained, to provide for adequate drought protection, not to expend the boundaries of the district, to focus on the short term goals of providing water for citizens already living within the district through retrofitting, reclamation, and leak detection among other conservation efforts. The POWR initiative would also prohibit the MPWMD from transferring the New Los Padres Dam permits without a public vote. Mr. Boehlert asked the CVPOA to support this initiative because it largely reflects the CVPOA's position. Pete Salmonsen, Chair of the Land Use Committee, objected to the POWR initiative because many POWR members and supporters are

The Tragic Tale of Divorce for Profit

For the past 30 years, the mainstream of psychiatric, psychological and family counselling thought and practice has had an easy package of "drop-out" answers for married people.

For the woman having difficulty with the stress of her husband's failure to get a raise, who wants both a baby and a career, the answer from the professionals was simple - leave him, get a divorce, express yourself.

For the man having an affair, real or imagined, and an angry wife and neglected child at home; the answer was simple - leave her, get a divorce, express your dreams.

For the sexually unfulfilled, the emotionally starved, intellectually depraved, professionally incomplete, financially unstable, or almost any other problem of a married pair of people the professional prescription has been the same - leave, divorce and be selfish.

Professionals have written volumes in books and journals decrying the problems they confronted when people objected to the standard prescription and said "we want to stay married". The professionals dreamt up new theories and techniques to improve their simple solution - leave, divorce, be selfish.

Counseling sessions turned into battle zones with professionals berating patients seeking marital help. Patients were told they could only be strong if they accepted the simple solution - leave, divorce, be selfish.

But, as the professionals moved closer to the core of marriage, they encountered more resistance from the clergy and families with a determined dedication to making marriages and families survive and function in the face of all kinds of adversity.

For the professionals, more divorces meant more clients, more money and more power within a society where people did not have a natural mate in whom the could confide, with whom they could consult and debate - even argue.

Argue!!! And the journals and intellectual pundits had a whole new reason to exist...to argue, to spank, to punish, to hit, to fight - this they could use. A few terrible examples could turn into the national concept of "abuse".

Abuse, they, along with idle prosecutors looking for new crimes, in a nation where crime is declining at a rapid rate, made into a new rally cry to impose their simple solution - leave, divorce, be selfish.

The objective of destroying marriage and interjecting the professional had a new bedfellow, a bureaucracy desperately looking for reasons to exist.

Together the professionals and the government could wreak havoc on the institution of marriage with their wonder concept called abuse. However, the market of real physical abuse of wives, husbands or children proved to be very small.

To expand the market and the money, the definition of the popular concept of abuse had to be expanded. They first called any physical contact abuse. You could not spank your child or grab your husband by the arm; even gently putting your hand on your wife's head might be called abuse.

The broader definitions of abuse were more fodder for the pocketbooks of the purveyors of the simple solution - leave, divorce, be selfish.

Abuse, the professionals, along with their newly enlisted radical feminist and hungry lawyers, grew broader in definition. Abuse has come to include words, looks, gestures and body language.

Abuse is the new rallying call of the professionals who seek to spill more money into their pockets with their simple solution - leave, divorce, be selfish.

Their are massive and powerful forces lined up to profit from the destruction of American marriages - professional therapists of all kinds, lawyers, Government employees and contractors, those who prosecute, who disburse welfare, who snatch children, who provide shelter, etc.

A word to the wise: when there are problems in a marriage, you may find the best counsel and guidance from those who have been successful for many, many years in marriage or from the clergy. The simple solution - leave, divorce, be selfish - seems to work best only for those who profit, not for those who intended at marriage to spend their lives together.

This is the best place in the world to live.

WHAT'S NEXT? Mel Vercoe

Well, back to the lemmings, with their remarkable method of limiting their population, so they won't oversex their species out of existence. The whole herd will get this irresistible urge to jump into the nearest lake or river and drown, but a few of them, for some reason, don't get the urge, and the species survives.

We humans are too smart to do anything that dumb, at least not yet. There are only six billion of us, and most of us still have food. We probably won't reach "critical mass" for two or three more generations. However, Nature is pretty smart, and maybe that's where the lemmings get the "limiting urge", and Nature may already have plans for us remarkable humans.

Giving us the intelligence to construct enough "mass destruction" weapons to pretty much wipe out our species may be part of the plan. Another part might be providing us with some very contagious and deadly viruses, that may be far beyond our ability to evade or combat. The AIDS problem, for example, and more recently, we hear of the "mad cow" and "blue tongue" diseases. Will they spread to humans? Will cures or preventions be discovered, and, if they are, will Nature then give up?

Meanwhile, Nature, which I consider a Supreme Being, seems to be getting no cooperation at all from some of our planet's major religions, which, instead of counselling their flocks to use moderation in reproduction activities to help the human species last longer, try to set new birth rate records in a continuing membership drive for power, religious and political.

Well, like I sometimes say, future historians, archeology diggers, whatever, will find us interesting to study and wonder about.

It would be fun to be there, when they study records of a very advanced form of government, a democracy that existed on the North American continent for two hundred years, until it became impossible to find intelligent and dedicated presidential candidates willing to let religious doctrines dictate governmental policies.

LETTERS to the Editor

A Chance for a Free Ride on Tobacco

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

For the past six years, the nation and the world have been looking to California's leadership in tobacco education/prevention resulting in disease reduction and savings in health care costs. The new program was the product of voter passage of Proposition 99. The proposition mandated that one quarter of the funds from a new 25-cents-per-pack tax on tobacco would be used for tobacco education, prevention and research. The program has never been fully funded by the legislature, still astounding reductions in tobacco use have been achieved. Additionally, the governor began illegally diverting funds, eventually cutting the tobacco education program to half of its intended funding. Even at these low funding levels of the past three years, some benefits were maintained; however youth rates of tobacco use have begun to increase again, signaling an upturn in nicotine addiction and the health problems and societal costs that it brings.

Full funding of the Tobacco Education/Prevention Research program needs to be restored at once. It looks as if tax payers will have to make this clear again to our legislators. To dismantle such a successful program will cancel the gains that have been made. It would shock the world if the model, California, falls to the caprices of the tobacco industry via our elected officials. If you appreciate smoke-free air, lowered health care costs, healthy families, contact your legislator today, tell him to support Senate Bill 1971 or Assembly Bill 2987 to restore full funding of Prop. 99 tobacco education.

The American Cancer Society, the American Heart Association, and the American Lung Association are the organizations who best realize the toll of health and lives taken by tobacco. Together they are urging everyone who values health, lowered health care costs, and integrity in government to let their legislators know we do. You can call Senator Mello and Representative McPherson locally or write to them; a little effort from you can make a big positive difference for the future.

Working to Prevent Another Flood...

Editor, Carmel Valley Sun:

The Carmel River Coalition (CRC) was formed by Carmel Valley business and property owners in April, 1995 to support and carry on the work and recommendations of the Carmel Valley River Flood Task Force. The primary focus has been to develop and implement solutions that will reduce the threat from flood to life, property, and the well-being of Carmel Valley residents and businesses. The CRC has asked for and received the full support and cooperation of Supervisor Karas, the Board of Supervisors, and the staff from many County agencies.

We would like to present our recommendation to you: to create a Flood Control Assessment Zone for the Carmel River which will provide funding for the Monterey County Water Resources Agency (WRA) to implement projects and provide

COMPUTER TALK

Val Healey

Part 6 - An introduction to computers at a naively simple level

We mentioned in the last part that all operations within the computer are reduced to 0s and 1s. Thus, at the most fundamental level, computers that scare the wits out of many people, know only the difference between 0 and 1. Every character that is typed at the keyboard, every word, every picture, and every operation or mathematical equation, no matter how complex, is ultimately reduced to 0s and 1s. When the required operations are performed, the results are translated back into something we can read and usually understand.

Numerous codes have been developed for representing characters such as the letters of the alphabet-upper and lower case-, numbers, punctuation marks and special characters such as @, #, $, %, >, /, \, ... etc. The best known, and one of the simplest codes, is ASCII - American Standard Code for Information Interchange and the most common version of it is the ASCII-8 Binary Code, which represents characters by strings of eight 0s and 1s. Actually these 0s and 1s are called "bits", an acronym for binary digits. A computer "byte" is a little chunk of information with 8 bits, in contrast to a mosquito byte and a love byte. For example the lower case letter a is represented by 11100001, upper case A by 10100001, # by 01000001, + by 01001011, etc. Thus, when the cpu sends or receives an ASCII character, it sends or receives the string of eight bits that represents that character.

A computer keyboard has about 90 characters, and each one is represented by the ASCII code. When a key is pressed a micro-processor in the keyboard sends the corresponding ASCII code to the cpu and it is placed in an 8-bit block of memory. In addition, the control unit of the cpu instructs the video driver to write the character on the screen of the monitor. The video driver is a program with instructions to convert the ASCII code back into the character and write it on the screen, or to display a picture, or whatever else is required. The monitor display is driven by a video card that is plugged into the motherboard and then connected via a multi-wire code to the monitor. The driver is supplied with the video card and has to be set up in the system when the card is installed.

When using a word processor one usually starts with an empty "file". If some words (text) are typed in, say to create a memo or letter, one usually has several choices about how to store it, or save it, as it is more usually described. One choice is always an ASCII file. This is a file that uses only the characters of the ASCII code, meaning that there is no formatting, such as bold letters, underlines, italics, etc. This file is now virtually universal in that all word processors can read it, whereas a file formatted in one brand of word processor will almost certainly not be readable by another. Thus, if you want to give somebody a text file, and you don't know the word processor they use, play it safe and give it an ASCII format on a diskette. The "saving" of the file is done either to the hard drive, which is usually permanently located in the cpu, or to a floppy diskette which may be taken away and used in another computer. Both hard drive and floppy diskette have the "ability" to store the zeroes and ones that correspond to the characters in an orderly manner so that they can be "read" again, i.e., pulled into memory and displayed on the monitor.

When I entered first grade, Ritchie Perry had already been there three or four years. He was huge. When Ritchie told one of us to get on the see-saw with him, we did it. The board was a 16-foot polished maple plank, and we shifted it so Ritchie would balance on the shorter side. He would go up and down about 18 inches, and we would go up and down about 3 feet. It was fun until Ritchie eased off the board at the bottom of his arc and we would drop like a rock. Ritchie knew all about leveraging, and we knew as much as he did after the first drop.

Ritchie would have done well as a bond trader. Bond traders are allowed to buy bonds with cash equivalent to sitting on the 2 foot side of a 16 foot see-saw, leveraged 8 times. It's a great ride going up on the 14 foot side, but it works both ways as those of us who have see-sawed with Ritchie know very well.

A $1000 30-year U.S. Treasury bond lost $31 of its trading value in the day's market on March 8 this year. Investors who bought the bond at $1000 lost 3.1%. Speculators who used $125 of their own money to buy the bond lost 24.8%. If a speculator actually sold out that day, add trading fees and interest on the borrowed $875 to the loss. Bummer. If, instead, the value had risen $31 that day, a speculator could have sold and booked a 24.8% gross profit...who cares what the fees and interest might be.

Speculators and leveraging have changed the flavor of bond investments, big time. One guesstimate for the amount of money now owed by bond speculators to foreign and domestic lending sources is $270 billion. Add to that another $552 billion spent by foreign central banks to buy U.S. Treasury securities (debt instruments), as a side-effect of their efforts to prop up the dollar's value. All those debt dollars in circulation have kept interest rates low. If, or as, interest rates begin to climb or seem about to climb, more and more investors will slide off the bond market see-saw, leaving leveraged speculators to fall like a rock. The soaring price of July grain contracts is a vivid signal that interest rates are about to climb.

While all this may sound horrible, the key ingredient is "time": how long it will take the process to balance out. If Orange County supervisors had not bankrupted the county by selling off its highly leveraged bond holdings, the county would have been made whole in the markets by the first of this year. The difference between rust and a bonfire is the rate at which oxidation occurs in each event. Unraveling on the speculative side of the bond market is as predictable as Richie Perry sliding off the see-saw, but the effect of such an occurrence will depend upon the rate at which it proceeds.

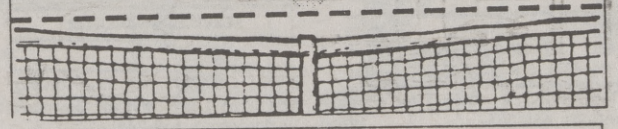
STAN SMITH'S TENNIS

HIT IT DOWN THE MIDDLE

In doubles, hit down the middle because the net is lower in the center.

Often a shot down the middle causes confusion on the other team.



Some doubles teams are so concerned with protecting the alleys that they leave a big gap down the middle. So pound the middle and, of course, protect your own!

services aimed at reducing the impact of flooding in Carmel Valley.

The WRA is the flood control agency for Monterey County. Flood Control is a service that is not provided out of other tax revenue. Most of the rivers in the County have Flood Control Assessment Zones to pay for this service, but the Carmel River does not. At the meeting, on Tuesday, April 23, 1996, 7 p.m., at Our Lady of Mount Carmel Church, Carmel Valley Village, Owen Stewart and Joe Madruga of the WRA will give a presentation of the proposed projects, services, and assessments that are recommended for Carmel Valley.

Available for your review will be a map of the area to be included in the zone (the Carmel River Watershed), a description of flood control projects and services to be performed, and the proposed benefits assessments.

With your support, the Board of Supervisors is prepared to create this benefit assessment zone by an administrative process which would include formal public notice and a public meeting in May, and hearings before the Board in July (it would not require an election.)

We hope that you will give this due consideration and join us in an effort to take a long overdue step towards making Carmel Valley a safer place to live and work.

opposed to a dam on the Carmel River. An official CVPOA position on the POWR initiative was not decided.

Roger Williams, Chair of the Health and Public Safety Committee, commented that the road work on Carmel Valley Road is dangerous due to unmarked open trenches. There was a discussion about if, and to what extent, Carmel Valley Road is going to be repaved after the construction. The board had received conflicting responses as to the repaving of Carmel Valley Road so the CVPOA decided to pursue an official answer from the Public Works Department.

Director Flippen reported that the interim improvements to the Highway 1 / Carmel Valley Road intersection were approved by the Planning Commission. The CVPOA had lobbied the Planning Commission to approve the interim improvements. A decision on this issue had been delayed due to a threatened lawsuit by a group who believed that the interim improvements were a waste of money and supported the construction of the Hatton Canyon Freeway instead. The approval of the interim improvements does not preclude the construction of the Hatton Canyon Freeway in the future.

Jerry Clark, CVPOA Treasurer, announced that he is resigning because he has accepted a job as Fire Chief in Alliance Nebraska. Ileen Crane-Franks, former CVPOA President, will serve out Mr. Clarks term as Treasurer.

Mrs. Baird, who lives at the corner of Rio Vista and Carmel Valley Road, addressed the board and said that the Public Works Department is tearing out 10 feet of her landscaping and moving the bus stop, at an estimated cost of $7,000, in an attempt to improve traffic circulation. Mrs. Baird said that widening the road and moving the bus stop will not improve traffic. Mrs. Baird further said that the Public Works department has ignored her repeated requests to remove brush from a ditch in the same area which causes flooding of her property and Carmel Valley Road, creating a hazard for vehicles and pedestrians. The CVPOA said that it would pursue this matter with the Public Works Department.

The next CVPOA meeting will be held on May 8 at 7:30 pm at the Mid Carmel Valley Fire Station Community Room; the meeting is open to the public.

A Summary of CV Development

Peter Salmonsen, Chair of the CVPOA Land Use Committee, presented a report of the status of development projects in Carmel Valley.

The Carmel Greens Project, behind Brinton's, is not proceeding at this time. The project would include 99 units on 22.4 acres. The Environmental Impact Report (EIR) was completed however the developer has not paid fees and 2 lots included in the development project were lost to foreclosure.

The EIR for the Rancho San Carlos project, which includes 300 residential lots, employee housing, a golf course, lodge and shops, was certified by the Board of Supervisors on February 6, 1996. The EIR includes 203 conditions which have to be met before the final subdivision map can be recorded and Rancho San Carlos has indicated that meeting these conditions will take at least a year.

The September Ranch development would include 100 market rate lots and 17 clustered inclusionary units on 891 acres. Whether a water supply is available will not be determined until the EIR is completed in mid-1996.

The Canada Woods project has received authorization from the Board of Supervisors to begin pregrading however the final subdivision map has yet to be filed. The project includes 50 lots on 900 acres on the north side of Carmel Valley Road and a service center, convenience store and 15 rental units on 50 acres on the south side of Carmel Valley Road; 39 of the 50 acres are to be open space and agricultural land in perpetuity. The water supply for this project is to be reclaimed sewerage and agricultural water from the Williams property.

A commercial service center is being planned on 49 acres of the Wolters property.

Nine lots have been approved for development on the Rancho Carmel (Holt Ranch) project on Robinson Canyon Road. The application for a subdivision of 59 lots on 419 acres has been withdrawn.

Construction is expected to begin shortly at Carmel Valley ranch on 64 homes in area F, above the hotel.

Eighty-three acres of the Veeder Ranch were purchased by the Big Sur Land Trust and will be transferred to the Regional Park District for Garland Park expansion rather than 25 lots and 4 inclusionary units.

New POWR Initiative Means to Protect Water Resources

By Elizabeth Cowley

Protect Our Water Resources (POWR) is circulating an initiative petition to direct the Monterey Peninsula Water Management District (MPWMD) to stop allocating new water until Cal-Am finds a secure replacement for its illegal water diversions from the Carmel River. POWR is chaired by Janice O'Brien, President of the Monterey Chapter of the League of Women Voters and Bud Nunn, former Pacific Grove City Councilman.

In addition to stopping new allocations the initiative would prohibit the transfer of New Los Padres Dam permits and the expansion of the MPWMD boundaries. The initiative would not allow the MPWMD to spend over $1 million on a project without voter approval and directs the MPWMD to secure a reasonable drought reserve. Ms. O'Brien said the focus of the initiative is to get the MPWMD to concentrate on the short term goals of not increasing water demand, finding a legal replacement to Cal-Am's illegal Carmel River diversions and ensuring a secure water supply for current residents.

Ms. O'Brien said POWR formed in January to assess what the no vote on the New Los Padres Dam meant. POWR's conclusion was that the voters felt the dam was a costly, growth inducing project and that it was time for a new approach. POWR is also concerned about the bill proposed by California State Senator Mello which would replace the existing elected MPWMD Board with an appointed board composed of City Mayors and two members from the Board of Supervisors. If Mello's bill becomes law it would also prohibit a public vote on future dam proposals. Ms. O'Brien said POWR supports the current board but wants it to address the water needs of current residents. POWR hopes that if the initiative receives public support Senator Mello will abandon his bill to replace the elected MPWMD board with an appointed one.

POWR needs the signatures of 10% of the registered voters within the district, about 6,000. If POWR gets 6,000 signatures the MPWMD can adopt the initiative or put it to a public vote. The signatures need to be obtained by the July MPWMD meeting date.
